MAINE SUFFRAGISTS START NEW CAMPAIGN

"Deferred, Not Defeated," Says Leader Regarding Yesterday's Vote

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 11.—The women of Maine are not downhearted today over the defeat of the woman suffrage amendment to the Constitution in the special election yesterday.

Supporters of the cause are already hard at work for another campaign for the right of women to vote. They are determined that the women of the State shall have the right to vote.

Mrs. Deborah K. Livingston, head of the movement in Maine, declared: "Woman suffrage has been deferred but not defeated. National and world suffrage for women is assured."

The defeat of the amendment was decisive, the vote being 17,639 to 11,943. The vote was 60,000 less than that had the referendum vote cast on the prohibitory liquor law in 1911.

Auburn and Rockland were the only cities which voted straight for suffrage. Among the influences which contributed to the defeat of suffrage in Maine the most important was the natural conservatism of the State, which hesitates to adopt sweeping legislation.

MAINE DEFEAT DOESN'T DISCOURAGE SUFFRAGISTS

Pickets and pacifism, Jeannette Rankin and war are among the various reasons given by suffragists and "antis" for the action of the State of Maine in voting "no" against the enfranchisement of women.

But the noticeable lack of disappointment on the part of the suffragists and the failure of those opposed to express any great exultation over the result indicate that the eyes of those interested in the enfranchisement of women are turned toward Washington with a concentration too great to be diverted elsewhere.

"Every State counts, of course," Mrs. Frederick Dreyer, secretary of the Woman's Suffrage Party of Philadelphia, said, "but we really are not greatly disappointed. We do not feel that suffrage has retrograded. The shadow of war is everywhere, more or less, of any radical change at a time like this. It is too much responsibility for one commonwealth to assume."

"A Federal amendment is our logical goal at a time like this, our bill is being introduced in the House by a committee of Congressmen from the suffrage States. It would have been gratifying to have had Maine represented, but it must be remembered that the first campaign in an eastern State is invariably educational. If Congress has not given us the ballot by that time, Maine will perhaps win in her next attempt," she added optimistically.

Frederick Dreyer, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania branch National Woman's party, found in the Maine referendum a strengthening of her belief in a concentration of all force toward a drive on the capital at Washington.

"The Maine defeat simply emphasizes once more the difficulty of winning State campaigns and will, undoubtedly, strengthen the position of the National Woman's party," she said.

"We have for some time past pointed out that there is a tremendous waste of time, energy and money in attempting to win women's political freedom through the eight State referendums. As emphasized by Dudley Field Malone in his letter of resignation to the President, there are about twenty States in which it is virtually impossible to get the Constitution amended."

In the second place, Maine's defeat shows that the gratitude of politicians is a most uncertain quantity. A number of prominent men have of late advised the pickets to devote the whole time and all of their energy to the prosecution of the war, and have assured them that the ballot would be given them as a reward of merit if this advice were taken.

"The Women's Party does not think that a democratic government should defer its efforts in this way, and is determined to demand without cessation, that justice be done here and now. No sentence by a District of Columbia judge nor hardship and no 'house of ill fame' can divert us from the straight and narrow path that we have marked out for ourselves."

"The justice of woman suffrage has long been established. Why not let us have it in the most direct and simple way—an amendment to the National Constitution?"

According to Mrs. Charles Penrose, of Devon, the secretary of the Pennsylvania Association of Women Opposed to Suffrage, the pickets who have heeded the Administration and Jeannette Rankin's "pacifist" vote against war are in large measure responsible for the suffrage result in Maine.

"The picketing is a disgrace to womanhood," she said, "and the vote of Miss Rankin was one of the biggest setbacks the woman who aspires politically ever had. The suffragists are fighting a losing battle. The 'antis' are not satisfied. Just as there is no reason for great activity in Pennsylvania, but we are turning our guns on Washington and on Ohio and Nebraska. In both of which States a suffrage referendum will be taken in the fall."

The Maine vote according to early returns was 16,273 for and 30,668 against woman suffrage.

USE CORNMEAL, HOOVER URGES

Has Twice as Much Nutrient as Same Amount of Flour

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—Cornmeal is the cheapest of nutritious foods according to Herbert Hoover, who, in a statement, urges more general use of the meal for making bread.

"There is twice as much nutritive value in a dollar's worth of cornmeal as in a dollar's worth of wheat bread at the present prices," said Mr. Hoover. "And corn must play a very important part in the conservation of wheat products. There are four bushels of corn raised in this country to every one of wheat and cornmeal is as good for food as wheat."

He also urged increased use of fish as food. America's fish consumption, it is shown, is eighteen pounds per capita annually, against sixty-five in England, fifty-four in Canada, fifty-two in Sweden, forty-four in Norway, thirty-nine in Denmark and thirty-seven in Portugal.

STRIKING TELEGRAPHERS PLEASED OVER OUTLOOK

Contesting Operators of P. R. R. Trenton Division Declare Move Is Spreading

TRENTON, Sept. 11.—The striking telegraph operators of the Trenton division of the Pennsylvania Railroad were greatly encouraged today by reports that operators of other divisions of the company would join the strike. Many declared the movement was spreading throughout the State and predicted that very shortly the railroads of New Jersey would be tied up. The grievance is chiefly over pay. The men contending that, in view of the advance cost of living, they cannot exist on what they are receiving. The strikers have been told that the operators of the Schuylkill division and those of the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad would join their ranks shortly.

The officials of the Trenton division of the Pennsylvania Railroad here declared today that their trains are operating after three days of the strike on almost a normal schedule, some trains being only about twenty minutes late. The strikers insist that about 95 per cent of their number is still out. About 200 men are on strike.

CLEAVES ISSUES ULTIMATUM

Superintendent E. J. Cleaves, of the Trenton division, today issued an ultimatum to the strikers, demanding that they return to their posts by tomorrow afternoon or relinquish their positions. Mr. Cleaves said this is the most serious ultimatum that has been made since the strike on almost a normal schedule. Superintendent Cleaves' ultimatum follows:

"Although the movement of our trains, both passenger and freight, is normal some of the operators are so ill-advised as to continue in the abandonment of their posts and in their failure to report for duty. This unsettled condition now has existed for more than three days, and it devolves upon you and our company for an assured and efficient service in the future to make such permanent arrangements as will no longer jeopardize the business of the Federal Government and the State of New Jersey."

VACANCIES TO BE FILLED

"While the necessity is to be regretted, I am, therefore, compelled to call your attention to the fact that you are public servants and to advise that each of you as the next report their readiness to be by 2 p. m., Wednesday, September 12, be considered as leaving the service of the company and their places will be filled permanently."

"These men will be kind enough to send me their names, as it will be no longer legal for them to be used, and risk their property as belongs to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. To those who will properly recognize responsibility and return to duty I will assure a hearing, if applied for in a proper and orderly manner, for such grievances as may exist."
